TECHNICAL PRESENTATION

For many years we have been taught in different academies of coaches different methodologies to teach soccer. The problem is that all of them were associated with professionalism or depended on the work of a physical coach.

Toni González, trainer level 3, investigated about it and for this he had the idea to contact with a pedagogue and clinical psychologist.

This research originated the sequential - global learning, in a way that establishes a kind of "subjects", as in the school, giving importance to those that make possible for soccer to be a collective sport, decision making and much movement.

The investigation created a "sequence" where one works in a global way, but giving importance to the concepts that integrate the sequence.

Toni González suggested: ball control + pass + avoiding your marker.

Like that, the concepts are organized and children with worse capacity of learning don't get left behind, since the rhythm goes in function of the less gifted kids.
